A financially FIT America

66% of American adults can't pass a basic financial literacy test.¹

40% of Americans don't have enough cash to cover a $400 emergency.²

38% of U.S. households have credit card debt.³

33% of American adults have $0 saved for retirement.⁴

In today's fast-paced consumer society, financial literacy is an essential everyday life skill. It can mean the difference between having the ability to understand and manage the financial landscape, manage limited financial resources and risks effectively, establish security, create opportunities and avoid financial pitfalls. Improving financial literacy can benefit anyone, regardless of age, income or background, but for impoverished communities, the impact can be extremely positive.

Adult learning is different and calls for a different kind of financial literacy education. As a result, programs directed at adult education need to focus on catering to these differences.⁵ Adults also learn more effectively when they are invested in the content and volunteer to be a part of the program.⁶ This is why the programs should also focus on aligning to the daily lives of adults. The FitKit Express™ starts with these critical components of success in mind and helps people make informed choices daily and throughout their lives. The FitKit Express™ offers a powerful tool with the potential to help the poor escape poverty by building savings, growing assets, planning for higher education, and creating wealth.

More than 40% of student loan borrowers are not making payments.⁷
